Commodus is the son of the famous empirical hero Marcus Aralias. When his father died in 180 AD Commodus became emperor at age 19. He was a miserable leader, and a curse on the roman empire. He loved executions and it didn't matter who, or what. He paraded as a gladiator and believed himself to be Hercules reincarnated wearing a lion skin and wielding a club. Many people plotted to assassinate him. And eventually the people succeeded in the year 192 AD.
